dressed to JAMES C. DUNN. CONVENTION OF NATURALIZED CITIZENS

The case of the self-styled Doctor Theller, of refractory history, is, it seems from the subjoined article, likely to continue the excitement created in regard to Canadian affairs, and perhaps involve us in National difficulties.

The individual who is the cause of this violation, is a British subject, who became for a while a citizen of the United States under our accommodating laws, and finally left us to resume his fealty to his ancient King, and took up his residence in one of the provinces. He was one of the "motive powers," at a distance from the scene of action in the Canada disturbances; he was a prudent agitator of the passions of others, and a careful protector of himself. Not content, however, with stirring up a rebellion to the laws of the land to which he owed, in the first place, a natural allegiance, and in the second, a duty by choice, he removed, or rather moved himself from the British possessions into the United States, but so near to the borders of the former as to have ready access to those who were disaffected. In this position he was encouraging the thoughtless of our people to engage in what he termed a turalization, and is, in itself, an argument to re-Patriot cause-one that was to liberate the sub- fute all that has been said in favor of these laws. jects of a foreign power from oppressions which the good never felt, and which the bad of all countries always fear-the restraints of law against the licentiousness of the loose. Our authorities very properly apprehended him, and having been tried as a violator of the laws of neutrality, as well as of the statutes of the country, he was sentenced by a proper tribunal to the punishment upon the good faith, as well as credulity, of our due to the offence.

The spirit of nationality among the foreigners in this Union, has been called into action upon this result. If it had been the case of some fanatic Native who had, in the zeal of establishing a universality of freedom like our own, enacted the same things, it would have been looked upon as a clear infraction of law, and the victim of his mistaken patriotism been left incarcerated to answer the vindictiveness of that law, and grow wiser by his suffering. But, as it is one of the foreign clan, the voice of this whole phalanx is raised, from the landing of the predatory refugee at the mouth of the Mississippi, to the contrabandists upon the borders of the Northern Lakes. Hence it is that petitions are concocted to enlist the agency of the weak among our own people, who, in the sympathy of their natures, forget the culprit, and the evils which his early apprehension has saved us, in the story of his sufferings, and the inspiration of the "name of Liberty."

As this question of the Boundary line is drawing nearer to a settlement between the two nations, one way or the other, we begin to look into the sort of materiel we have among our adopted citizens, as a mass, in the event of an emergency of the worst kind. This examination convinces us neither of a unity of feeling upon our public affairs, nor of a nationality of character, which is so necessary to sustain them when the time comes that to sustain them makes us continue altogether as an American people, or to fail makes us what our present folly encourages-the subjects of for-

As regards the result of this intended Convention, which proposes either to make the British concede that naturalized citizens here lose their ancient fealty, or that our laws shall be adapted to this point, or in other words, that if Great Britain insists upon the enforcement of the principle, that "once a subject always a subject," then we must repeal our laws of naturalization, we undertake to predict, that although this is a most wise and proper object for a Convention, and its labors should not only be directed to that end but should accomplish it, still we know so much of the esprit du corps among the whole body of foreigners, that this nominally good object will be made a mere pretext to denounce the laws of England on this subject, and to digest the means of perpetuating the folly of the present laws of Naturalization, so that henceforth, upon questions of National polity affecting the parties of adopted citizens, or their distant countrymen, they will be enabled to move in solid column against the Natives, and thus establish an irresponsible power, more potent than the laws.

STATE CONVENTION OF NATURALIZED CITIZENS. -A question has arisen of deep interest, not only to our naturalized citizens, but to the whole population of this country, in consequence of the claims set up by Great Britain, and not denied by the present Administration, concerning subjects of that country who may have be-The British hold that persons born in their country cannot expatriate themselves, and the doctrine "once a subject always a subject," is one that we have controverted and disregarded in the formation of our Constitu-

This presents a question of great delicacy and difficulty, and the British must either concede the point or our Government adapt their laws to this principle. The question is whether a man can expatriate himself, and ome an alien to the country of his birth? If he cannot, our naturalization laws hold out to the emigrant im proper inducements, which ought to be abolished. If on the other hand, the subjects and citizens of other countries have the right to transfer their allegiance to this, and become citizens, they are entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities of natural born citizens; and it is the duty of our government to product and them in those rights, in all cases whatsoever.

This subject is exciting the anxious attention of our maturalized citizens, in consequence of the refusal of Mr Van Buren to claim Dr. Theller as an American citizen, and the decision of the British Ministry that he should be treated as a subject of their country.

A State Convention of Naturalized Citizens has been recommended at Syracuse, on the 2d Monday of this month, to be composed of as many delegates from each casualty.

county as they have members in the Legislature for the purpose of memorializing the next Congress to take such an action on the subject as the case requires.

FOLLY OF EMPLOYING FOREIGNERS.

Every body knows that a man by the name of Featherstonhaugh was, sometime ago, styling himself United States' Geologist, and whether there is any such office by law or not, was, nevertheless, receiving a handsome salary for the supposed duties of such a situation. While here, grea umbrage was taken and expressed at this prefer ence, but the papers on the other side argued so much about the value of adopted citizenship, and said so much to prove that a foreigner, after he had resided here five years, and taken the oath of abjuration to his own country and fealty to this. was as good, if not better, than a Native; that we were obliged to let this case go with the ten thousand such others that are proved to be cases of patriotic truth as well as legal right. We made many arguments to the contrary, but they were intercepted by the number of artificial sophistications which the foreigners and their allies, some of the recusant Natives, piled like Pelion upon Ossa against us.

Since then, however, this Mr. Featherstonhaugh went to England, and comes out in less than three months in a new character-that is to say, after the term of his profitable occupation here ceased he takes up with a new calling for his old country, or rather his own country, and returning in the next steam-packet, appears before us a British subject, as a Commissioner for England, to settle her disputed right of territory against us. This fact is a burlesque upon our whole system of Na Besides this sudden metamorphosis, we have heard it said that while here, as United States' Geologist, he was gaining admission upon the floor of Congress, under the privilege of one of its rules, as Attache of the British Legation. I such was the case, it was certainly a fraud, no only upon our laws, but was a moral imposition people. We trust a Committee of Congress will find this of sufficient importance to be inquired into; it is, at least, an item to show the folly of attempting to transform the affections by operation of law, from a country and interests to which they were indissolubly united by nature and education

TWELFTH STREET BRIDGE.

We have heard a number of persons, without reflection, pronounce judgment of condemnation against the Corporation for the late accident of the falling of this bridge, with that great overgrown, Patagonian, and unusual omnibus of sixty passenger capacity, and at the same time undertake to say that the individuals exposed were entitled to damages. Now, we have always been the most unfortunate community as regards selfinterest in the country, and whether it proceeds from the changeableness of our population, which is of a migratory cast, going out with the decline of one Administration, and coming in with the vengeance of another, or from the fact that the greater portion of our municipal charges are borne by a few, and therefore, the majority have no part or lot in our liabilities, and talk at random, we do not know; but, certain it is, that we have always een under the influence of a suicidal policy, in relation to the imposition of burthens, and the distribution of our revenue.

Those persons who talk so inconsiderately about the liability of the Corporation for damages. ought first to inquire whether the City of Washington has any legal ownership in, or jurisdiction over, the streets and avenues of the City; and secondly, if they have not, who have? for responsibility and authority in such matters must

It happens that the indifference which we have always manifested for a care of our own property -that is to say, of the property holders-has always exalted a number of persons, in times past. to obtain seats at our respective Councils, who had little good influence among our people, no just conception of our wants or their duties, and comparatively nothing at stake in our community Hence we have had bad laws, a supineness o action, or by fits and starts a heedless activity and officiousness which has led the Corporation into trouble and unnecessary responsibilities.

The very accident in question, arises from that cause; for if we had not, in a moment of bustling and premature action, undertaken, without any strict legal authority, to assume a jurisdiction over the passways and streets, we never should have been put to the expense of building bridges, opening avenues, or paving footways; and this discussion of liability about Twelfth street bridge, never would have had any reference to the Corporation.

The fact is, that Congress, although it gave the City police authority over the streets, never surrendered its own jurisdiction and ownership; and in former times, when Mr. Jefferson used to call the attention of the Superintendents of the City to our affairs, he advised that when the sales of the public lots were not sufficient for the opening of streets and the laying of the necessary pavements and gangways, estimates should be prepared, in order that Congress might make the appropria-

Now, if our municipal authorities would relinquish their supervision of this matter, and refer the whole proprietorship of our common roads and streets to the true owners, and unite the strength of the people in urging them, the Representatives, to " mend our ways," we should not only get efficient hands to stand between us and our embarrassed Corporation, but would put stopper on those speculative argufiers who pretend to hold the Corporation liable for damages by

THE GREAT WESTERN .- The N. York Commercial Advertiser says, in relation to the last trip evening, (11th inst.) at the usual hour. of this ship, "It is conceded by all who were on board, many of whom have crossed the Atlantic several times, that the trip of the Western, just completed, was more boisterous than any they ever made at this season of the year. The ship has passed in triumph a most severe ordeal, in which she shipped a sea that sprung three of the forecastle beams, carried away the fore cabin sky lights and companion-way, and stove the large cook-house or galley on the main deck. During the height of the gale, some five or six of the seamen were driven from the wheel, all of whom were more or less injured; one having his collarbone broken. Yet, amid all the war of elements. the gallant ship rode out the gale in triumph."

CLERICAL APPOINTMENT .- We understand that at a very large meeting of the Church and Congregation of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of this city, (late Rev. Mr. Noble's) held on Monday evening last, for the purpose of electing a pastor, the Rev. John C. Smith, late of Bridge street church, Georgetown, was elected .- Nat. Intell.

The Rev. Robert T. Berry, of the Winchester Presbytery, has been invited to officiate as a stated supply for the Presbyterian Church in Georgetown, D.C., and we understand he has consented so to do, and will enter upon his duties next month .- Charlestown Free Press.

Yellow Fever .- The deaths in New Orleans, by yellow fever. The Courier then adds this cantion:

"Not only are the intemperate and the extremely poor taken down, but persons in good circumstances, and leading quiet and sober lives. The natives of Louisana, if born out of New Orleans, have not entirely escaped. The number of victims will undoubtedly be reduced, as the circle of persons liable to take the disease, grows smaller; but the experience of former years has shown that epidemics become more malignant in September and October, and seldom disappear until the ground is covered with frost and ice. We advise then, unacclimated persons not to come among us, until cold weather sets in.'

The Drought .- There is complaint of drought at the South as well as the West .- The Charleston Courier, of Saturday, gives the following as an extract of a letter, dated the 2d instant, near Monk's Corner:-" The drought is about to cut off our pea and slip crops. There has not been, in my remembrance, so long a spell of dry weather. My green seed crop is doing badly. It is now nearly open. Backward crops are doing worse. We will not be troubled with late picking, this year."

In the West, that is in certain sections of Ohio and Kentucky, the drought continues but little mitigated; and it is thought that the corn throughout these States will not come up to an average

FREDERICKSBURG, SEPT. 13th, 1839.

The Circuit Superior Court of Law and Chan cery, for the County of Spottsylvania, Judge Lomax presiding, commenced its Fall Session, on Monday last, at the Court House. The most interesting criminal case, was the trial of Elizabeth Richardson, for the murder of her son, in May last. After a full examination of the testimony and an able defence by her counsel, the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree, and sentenced her to sixteen years imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

and was sentenced to six months imprisonment in the county Jail, on low and coarse diet. The Judge in pronouncing sentence on the woman. addressed her in eloquent and affecting terms .-

Loss of the Lake Erie Steam Ship Great Western .- From the last Buffalo papers we learn that this fine new boat was burned to the waters edge while lying at the dock at Detroit. on Sunday evening 1st inst.

Wonderful Escape .- The St. Augustine Herald states that one of the laborers in Mr. Dallam's employ has arrived at Tampa, with the following $189 15 story, which, in addition to his being a man of credibility, is corroborated by the marks of ligatures on his arms, and of burns on his legs. When the Indians made the attack on Col. Harney, this man was taken alive and tied to a tree with leathan old squaw brought a quantity of wood, placed A shower providentially coming up deadened the fire, and at the same time softened the leather, which enabled the man with tremendous exertion. to loose one arm so as to untie himself--then watching his opportunity, he dropped on his hands and knees, creeped to the beach, where finding a canoe he put off. After reaching what he considered a safe distance, he landed on a point, where he subsisted on raw clams, until he got on board of a small vessel that was passing.

Com. Elliot .- The Court of Inquiry appointed to investigate the charges against Commodore Elliot, have sent in their report to the Secretary by a Naval Court Martial-Commodore Stewart

Col. David Crockett .- Extract of a letter from Helly Springs to gentlemen of Wheeling, dated

"It is stated that Colonel David Crockett is yet were two men who were known to be in the battle of Alamo, passed through Memphis a few days ago, who say they escaped from the mines will be at least ten thousand troops from Tennessee to volunteer in less than two weeks. I am determined to go.'

This is probably a "western tale" something like a" fish story."]
